Dermal fillers: Considerations before injecting

Maryati Maharon

Dr MM Clinic, Malaysia

Dermal fillers are one the highest indications for non-surgical medical aesthetic procedures in the world. With more and more doctors deciding to jump into the medical aesthetics field, there are a lot of considerations that need to be addressed prior to injecting patients. It may appear easy as even non-medical doctors have been injecting people with various types of fillers. In this presentation, we will be discussing the different type of fillers over the years and the difference in techniques. The safety precautions and complications that have arisen and whether is there really a difference in terms of filler properties. We would also discuss the newer fillers and past fillers which have been taken off the market. And finally we would discuss charges on how to set the price of the filler service as the idea is not just to sell the product but also to include the service charge of the doctor.
