Ethnicity and skin care: Tantalizing challenge

Howard I Maibach
University of California, USA

The changing world-wide demography/economics has focused on the future of skin care/cosmetics to accept the reality that Caucasian-centric thinking is no longer commercially enlightened. This presentation encapsulates the skin science (anatomy, physiology and function) that provide insights as to how formulations (as well as pharmacologic and toxicologic evaluation) will be developed- taking these “ethnic” differences into consideration.
