

10th International conference on

OPHTHALMOLOGY AND OPTOMETRY

August 10-11, 2017 Beijing, China

IOL monovision: Pearls, pitfalls and contraindications

Fuxiang Zhang

Downriver Optimeyes Supervision Center-Taylor, USA

Components I. Why do we choose IOL Monovision? II. What tests do we have to do prior to the decision-making? III. What information should we cover during the office consult when a patient is interested in IOL Monovision? IV. What is the preferred level of planned anisometropia? V. Does crossed Monovision work? VI. What are the potential contraindications? VII. What are the key factors in order to achieve success? VIII. Who should be your first few pseudophakic Monovision patients?

Biography

Fuxiang Zhang has completed his first Ophthalmology Residency training in China. He came to the USA in 1989 and completed his second Ophthalmology Residency training at Kellogg Eye Center, University of Michigan from 1994-1997. He has been a Senior Staff Member at the Department of Ophthalmology, Henry Ford Health System since 1999. He has focused on refractive cataract surgery and IOL monovision for the last 20 years. He has been frequently invited as an honorable or keynote speaker and has been invited to be a guest Editorial Board Member by numerous ophthalmology journals. His clinical research and numerous publications in prestigious journals have been focused on refractive cataract surgery and IOL monovision.

fzhang1@hfhs.org

Notes: