Challenging process of creating a health carers lab

Creation of a new nursing lab environment was a challenging process. Especially, for a lab that was not only to be used by nursing students, but by other health carers. Finding a common group was an exigent process. From the initial conception of which architect to hire and what was needed in the lab, until the first day of class when the lab was opened; it involved collaboration and compromise among all health carers. This collaborative process is the focus of our presentation.
