

Ahmad Alkhatib

Albarsha Health Care Center, UAE

Collaboration between nurses and physicians in medical practice

Nurses and physicians are the cornerstone in medical services, for decades the relation between them is important to both sides and at the end reflects on the patient care and gives good environment of work. Talking about this correlation is affected by many factors, including personality traits in physicians and nurses; it is also a part of communication skills which we used to learn and practice in our careers. The Highlights will be discussed briefly in the following. Many researches and exploration has been hoping to have an understanding of both sides of stalk and to practice how to make better collaboration in the future.

Biography

Ahmad Alkhatib graduated his MBBS degree from Aleppo University, Faculty of Medicine and has pursued his Board of Family Medicine. He has worked in Tabuk Armed Forces Hospital.

aialkhatib@dha.gov.ae