

5th International Conference on

Mental health and Psychology

March 16-17, 2024 | Paris, France

Volume: 14

Factors Contributing to Job burnout among educators of higher educational institutions

Aayushi Saxena

Jain Deemed-to-be University, India

The study aims to identify the major factors that have been rampant and common among various studies done previously on job burnout among higher educational institutions across India. These include studies done on government and private universities, government and private colleges. With the identification of the common various factors, we can provide a remedial solution for coping with burnout of the educators.

Key words: Higher educational institutions, Educators, job burnout.

Biography

Aayushi Saxena is a dedicated student at Jain Deemed-to-be University, India, currently pursuing her academic interests with a focus on [specific field or subject]. With a keen passion for learning and innovation, she actively participates in research and extracurricular activities. Aayushi has demonstrated strong leadership skills and a commitment to personal growth. Her future aspirations include making a meaningful impact in her field and contributing to societal advancement.