Barcelona's climate makes it an excellent holiday choice during any time of year. Its warm summers and mild winters ensure there are always things to do, making it easier to plan readers' trips during the off-season to catch those better rates. Barcelona has dozens of attractions to spark the varied interests of any traveler such as shopping, history, animals, architecture and sports. Barcelona is one of the most beautiful cities in the world. It has been home to some very famous artists such as Pablo Picasso and Salvador Dali. There are many art galleries, lush public spaces, and beautiful architecture to explore in Barcelona.

The best way to find the best rates on airline tickets is to travel during the week and travel on late at night flights. If readers book their flight online, it's best to use a site that compares the prices of multiple travel sites and airlines. Sometimes sites specialize in last-minute deals. With the internet, it is also very easy to see and plan routes on the public transportation system in Barcelona. Readers don't have to stay in five-star hotels to have a great time on their trip to Barcelona. If readers have no problem sharing a room with other people, using hostels can be a great way to save money while traveling.

Many people might not realize that Barcelona has 9 different beaches within the city limits. With nine different beaches to choose from, including Nova Icaria, Bogatell, Mar Bella, Nova Mar Bella, Llevant, Somorrostro, Barceloneta, Sant Miquel, and San Sebastian

Beach, there is no shortage of beaches for people to enjoy a swim at. Visiting the beach in Barcelona is not just about swimming in the sea, or playing volleyball on the pitch. Several of the beaches in Barcelona have restaurants and bars, which means that people can enjoy a drink and Spanish tapas while still experiencing the fun and excitement of visiting the beach.

If readers can't stay in the water forever, Barcelona's beaches are close to a city that boasts plenty to do. They can explore Roman remains and other ancient landmarks. Pablo Picasso called Barcelona home, and Barcelona has museums dedicated to him. Las Ramblas is the lively part of the town, with shops, markets, theatres and an opera house. Readers can also visit the Columbus Monument, an enormous monument to Christopher Columbus that stands 200 feet tall. Architect Antoni Gaudi created some of the city's beautiful buildings and an outdoor park. But if not everybody loves beaches, architecture, art and shopping, Barcelona is also famous for its great football.

Readers will learn about 5 Museums in Barcelona and how they can get free entry to them. These are only a few examples of the many other museums where they can enter for free. When democracy was established in Spain, after many years of dictatorship, the Catalan government determined the importance of having a museum that represented the Catalan national heritage and identity. This was the principle for the creation of the Catalonia History Museum. The Natural Science Museum of Barcelona was founded over 130 years ago and is housed in three centers which are located in different areas of the city. The Natural Science Museum of Barcelona has its origins back to the end of the 19th century, when the collections of the naturalist Francesc Martorell i Peña were donated to the city, that later became the first public museum of Barcelona.

Museu Frederic Mares was opened in 1946 in part of the former royal palace which was once home to the Counts of Barcelona, located in the heart of Barcelona's Gothic Quarter. The collection is divided into two main sections: the sculpture collection and a collection of everyday objects and collectors' items. The Music Museum of Barcelona opened the doors to the public in 2007 in the building of L'Auditori (the concert hall known as auditorium) and showcases a collection of nearly 500 musical instruments from various cultures and periods, which is considered the most important in Spain. The Palau de la Virreina is a beautiful baroque building located on the famous Las Ramblas, and is the house of the Barcelona Culture Institute, which is a public institution, created by the Barcelona City Council to foster cultural activities in the city, as well as the events in La Virreina Image Centre. The program of La Virreina includes exhibitions related to photography, art, audiovisual works, literary festivals, digital documentation, lectures, book publishing and more.
