Abstract: When a woman feels dissatisfied with her sex life, she may find a lover outside marriage to meet her needs. The belief that men cheat, but women do not is false. Married men and women are equally likely to cheat. But they do so for different reasons. Men commit infidelity primarily because physical urges drive them while women do so for sexual and emotional fulfilment. A woman's reasons for cheating are more complex than a man's. Mentioned below are some reasons women are unfaithful. She feels neglected, ignored, and underappreciated a wife needs to feel she is the cynosure of her husband's eyes. She wants to feel desirable. When her husband neglects her, ignores her, and does not appreciate her, she feels undesirable. To feel desirable, she may find a lover outside marriage. From time to time, a wife would like her husband to treat her like a girlfriend. She wants him to take her on romantic dates, buy her gifts, and vacation with her. However, when she feels like a nanny or maid, it may prompt her to find a lover who shows her an exciting time. Her marriage lacks intimacy Women feel connected through non-sexual interactions. When a husband is thoughtful towards his wife, engages in fun conversations with her, participates with her in building a home, and is a co-partner in her social life, it supplies her with the emotional intimacy she craves. When such emotional intimacy is lacking, a wife may seek it from someone outside the marriage.
