INTRODUCTION

Journal of Women's Health Care is an open access, peer-reviewed journal that publishes information on all aspects of the science of women. The main objective of the journal is to set a forum for education, and exchange of opinions, and to promote research and publications globally. We aim to make a difference. We strive to contribute to efforts to provide services to all researchers: young and old, rich and poor, and rural or urban.

The Journal provides a platform for all clinicians, surgeons and health professionals to contribute their findings and help raise awareness among the community on women's healthcare including but not limited to Women's Health, Pregnancy and Childbirth, Reproductive and Sexual Health, Obesity and Cardiovascular Diseases, Carpal Tunnel Syndrome, Midwifery, Polycystic Ovary Syndrome (PCOS), Post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), Osteoporosis and Bone Health, Depression and Mental Health, Breast Cancer, Oncology Rehabilitation for Cancer, Sexually Transmitted Infections, Menopause, Uterine Diseases, Women's Health Check-ups, Diet & Exercise, Ovarian Health. We aim to publish highest quality clinical content via open access platform providing the readers free, immediate and unlimited access.

During the decade, we published papers from all the major countries including United States, Japan, United Kingdom, India, Egypt and Nigeria. Researchers visit our journal domain to learn about the on-going research activities in this field. With the continuous guidance of our eminent editors we strive to become the best. The role of an editor is not easy; to paraphrase "An editor's role is not a happy one." Every day your editors are faced with making difficult choices about which articles can be published in the journal and contribute to improving research. We recognize the importance of publication therefore we assess articles on the quality of the research, analysis, data presentation, and writing. All articles must have the approval of the appropriate ethics committee and follow the best research practices.

There are several developments during the decade that have been important trends in publication. The rapid increase in the availability and speed of the Internet and mobile communications has been an important contributor to fast publication. Access has now reached into many of the remotest parts of the world to connect with more researchers. We promote our authors work through regular tweets on twitter, Facebook and LinkedIn.

We thank all of our authors, editorial board members, reviewers, and staff who have made the past decade successful for the journal. In the next decade, we target to improve on the quality and authenticity of the data published in our journal. We dream of quality papers that address women's health needs and are written in English to an international standard. Papers that are of a high scientific and ethical standard with appropriate statistical analysis. Please work with us to achieve our dream and the dream of quality research on women's health care.
