Editorial: Bipolar Disorder: Open Access

Javier Fiz Perez[*]

Department of Psychology, European University of Rome, Italy

Bipolar disorder is a mental disorder characterized by periods of elevated moods and periods of depression. The symptoms of bipolar disorder are spoken in rapid depression, uninterruptible racing thoughts, hypersexuality and insomnia. Bipolar disorder mainly causes to genetic, physiological, environmental, neurological, neuroendrological, evolutionary factors.

Bipolar Disorder Journal is an Open Access, Peer- reviewed journal which encompasses on-going research work on neuropsychopharmacology, neuropathology, genetics, brain imaging, epidemiology, phenomenology, clinical aspects, and treatments of bipolar disorders. It is aims to publish the complete and reliable source of information in the mode of original articles, review articles, case reports, short communications, etc."

Bipolar disorder Journal is one of the best open access journal publishing high quality manuscripts in the field and making them freely available through online without any restrictions or any other subscriptions to researchers worldwide. This scientific journal includes a wide range of fields in its discipline to create a platform for the authors to make their contribution towards the journal and the editorial office promises a peer review process for the submitted manuscripts for the quality of publishing.

The archived content of the journal represents the track of progress made in this field over the past year. The information gathered by the journal functions as resource of refined knowledge for academicians, scientists, physicians, clinical and medical professionals. The volume of information contained on the journal web-site is contributed by authors from different regions of the world. Due to these reasons readers hailing from diverse professional backgrounds and regions are interested in the journal content.

With the continuous guidance of our eminent editors we strive to become the best. The role of an editor is not easy; to paraphrase "An editor's role is not a happy one." Every day our editors are faced with making difficult choices about which articles can be published in the journal and contribute to improving research. We recognize the importance of publication therefore we assess articles on the quality of the research, analysis, data presentation, and writing. All articles must have approval of the appropriate ethics committee and follow the best research practices.

There are several developments during the decade that have been important trends in publication. The rapid increase in the availability and speed of the Internet and mobile communications has been an important contributor to fast publication. Access has now reached into many of the remotest parts of the world to connect with more researchers. We promote our authors work through regular tweets on twitter, Facebook and LinkedIn.

We thank all of our authors, editorial board members, reviewers, and staff who have made the past decade successful for the journal. In the next decade, we target to improve on the quality and authenticity of the data published in our journal. We dream of quality papers that address public health needs and are written in English to an international standard. Papers that are of a high scientific and ethical standard with appropriate statistical analysis. Please work with us to achieve our dream and the publish quality research on Bipolar Disorder.

*Corresponding author: Javier Fiz Perez, Department of Psychology, European University of Rome, Italy, E-mail: javier.fizperez@unier.it